3.1. WEALMATY (PROJECT MANAGEMENT, ALMATY, KAZAKHSTAN 2017-2020)

WeAlmaty was a three-year initiative aimed at assisting the City of Almaty to realize its vision of development until 2020 in the areas of culture, business, and active citizenship, supporting local government leaders to work with civil society.

A coalition consisting of the British Council, the Kazakh-British Technical University, Almaty Akimat (local authority), and the Almaty Development Centre designed and ran WeAlmaty, and a European Union grant funded its operation.

During this project we held five big forums, three workshops for citizens, many small events, one festival, and three visits to the UK.

Figure 3.1: This photo was taken during the first event in 2017 when we first engaged citizens in urban development.

Figure 3.2: Me and my colleagues from the local authority, British Council, and Kazakh-British Technical university selected and gave grants of 5000 euros to 10 urban projects

All these photographs are online and in open access:
https://www.facebook.com/wealmaty/
https://www.britishcouncil.kz/wealmaty/about

My role was to manage the project on behalf of the company where I worked during this period (Almaty Development Center). I was involved in the organisation of the events as the person who set the agenda and themes.

Figure 3.3: This photo shows me giving an opening speech and the citizens who were selected to participate in the workshop in 2018.

Figure 3.4: Me and my collegues during the 'Almaty - city for Children' forum organised with UNICEF and teenagers from local schools